EDITORIAL

Mary Baldwin Seminary has adopted Mary Baldwin College and this September will receive her daughter within her gates. Our beloved Seminary will not pass out of existence, but the two as parent and child will work together for broadening the mind and strengthening the character of all those who are privileged to enter her halls to seek knowledge.

We, of the Alumnae Association, are not asked to forget our cherished memories for our Alma Mater, but to join them with our hopes and aspirations for a future as glorious and far reaching as her past. The Seminary "carries on," and now calls to each Alumna to give generously of her time and interest in helping our dear Alma Mater to render to the girls of coming generations the same service she has rendered us.

ANNUAL BUSINESS MEETING

The annual business meeting of the Mary Baldwin Seminary Alumnae Association was held Friday morning, May 25, 1923, at the Seminary.

The former president, Mrs. Annie Cobb-Toms, resigned in 1922, and Mrs. Annie Hotchkiss-Howison, vice-president, acting as president pro tem presided at the meeting. The meeting was called to order and opened by a prayer.

A recent poem "Every Woman" of Mrs. Roselle Mercier-Montgomery was read by Mrs. Howison.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and accepted.

The Corresponding Secretary reported the number of letters she had written during the past year.

The Treasurer's report was then read and accepted.

The auditing committee reported that the books of the Association Treasurer and Treasurer of Missionary Scholarship Committee were correct.

The report of the Alumnae Scholarship Committee was in the form of a letter of thanks from Pauline Harris, the Alumnae Scholarship pupil. Miss Harris has been awarded this scholarship for the session of 1923-24, when she will be a graduate of the Seminary.

Miss Irene Haislip occupied the chair while Mrs. Howison read the following reports and recommendations:

REPORT OF THE MISSIONARY SCHOLARSHIP COMMITTEE

The Missionary Scholarship Committe in presenting its third Annual Report again commends the members of the Association for their loyal support in response to our annual letter sent out in March, 1923; the treasurer's report will follow this one giving you the story of our fine financial standing up to date.

The Committee has met from time to time to consider the reports of our student Virginia Alby Bull and any other matters pertinent to our Committee.

At our meeting in March we again gave the Scholarship for 1923-24 to Virginia Bull having had most satisfactory reports of her work, conduct and interest in school activities from the Principal, Miss Higgins and those members of the faculty giving her instruction—the Committee feels that to make this scholarship of real worth to the beneficiary she should, if her work and standing merit it, be given the advantage of the full Seminary course of study. We received a most appreciative letter from Virginia when she was notified of her re-appointment and Mrs. Bull under date of March 31st writes us from Kunsan Chosen, Japan, 'Mr. Bull is just back from an itinerating trip and joins with me in again thanking you and your Committee and the Alumnae Association for the great kindness of re-appointing Virginia for 1923-24. I have tried to express the gratitude that is in my heart in former letters, but each year as we have seen Virginia's development we appreciate more and more, if that is possible, what this scholarship has meant to her as well as to us; Virginia expresses the deepest appreciation of the great advantages you kind friends have made possible for her—we left her and our son William children and I cannot realize that when we go to the U. S. on our regular furlough in 1924 we shall find them fully grown young man and woman. That verse about "those who have left children" Luke 18-29-30 has a new meaning to us and we count this help from the M. B. S. A. A. as part of "the 100 fold."

We again have in hand funds over and above the Scholarship fees for the annual investment toward permanent endowment of this Scholarship and feel confident of the same loyal support and interest from the members of the Association for the coming year.

Respectfully submitted,

ANNUAL REPORT OF ACTING PRESIDENT

Members of the M. B. S. A. A.

The past year has been filled with problems and surprises both in our Association work and in the great forward step of our Alma Mater in the setting-up of a Mary Baldwin College.

Soon after the 1922 meeting of our Association the local vice president was notified by the Corresponding Secretary that neither the newly-elected president nor the first vice-president could accept office; an Executive Committee meeting was called and three Alumnae in succession were importuned to accept the presidency, but our efforts to fill this office were fruitless and the executive committee decided the one remaining vice-president should act as president until such time as this office could be filled.

Nothing of outstanding importance was accomplished until February, 1922, when the acting president called an Executive Committee meeting and presented the draft of a circular letter for consideration and approval; this was accepted and sent out to all Association members to give them the initial report of the definite establishment of a Mary Baldwin College.

The president personally sent out 700 of these circulars to all association members and other Mary Baldwin girls.

This announcement received the hearty endorsement of Dr. Fraser, president, and other members of the Board of Trustees, numerous letters were received in response to this circular letter, from the New York, the Atlanta, the Knoxville, the Western Pennsylvania Chapters and from alumnae and former students heartily endorsing this forward step for the higher education of women, pledging their loyal co-operation; many questions were asked which we could not at this time answer, having given out in the circular letter all authentic information possible, but thru Dr. A. M. Fraser, acting president of Mary Baldwin College, up to date data will be given in the 1923 Bulletin.

We are glad to report the organization of a Western Pennsylvania Chapter with Edna Baer-Furst president, and Mary Black, secretary. Your executive committee met in March to consider that most important business, the securing of a president for the Association, the happy and successful result of this meeting will be embodied in the recommendations to be presented for your consideration at the close of this report.

Members of the Association are urged to carefully read the annual "Bulletin" especially Chapter Presidents previous to their annual meetings for it gives in full the report of our annual meeting and correct up to date information as to our activities and progress.

The women of today are steadily forging ahead along all lines of worth while endeavor in the affairs of our country and are being recognized more and more as a power to be duly recognized and considered; no later than May 24th the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church convened at Montreat, N. C., gave its women the right of representation on its four Executive Committees by the overwhelming vote of 140 to 49; by this action of the highest court of our church we may naturally infer that similar actions will pass on down the line of our lesser church courts, and as the Mary Baldwin system is under the control of the Virginia Synod, may we not hope, yes even expect, in the course of years to see our Association represented on the board of the M. B. S. and M. B. C.—however this advancement and power, spells for us in big letters RESPONSIBILITY and if we women are to do our part we must meet this responsibility; today your loyalty and love for our Alma Mater is challenged as never before and in the biggest way; she is counting on you. Will you answer to roll-call "present" and do your part in the making of a greater Mary Baldwin?

Respectfully submitted
ANNE HOTCHKISS-HOWISON,
Acting President

RECCOMENDATIONS OF ACTING PRESIDENT

Approved by Executive Committee and presented for your consideration—

No. 1 "That the Association approve the action of its Executive Committee in appointing Reba Andrews-Arnold, alumna of 1911, as president for the coming year. Mrs. Arnold is peculiarly fitted to take the helm at this critical period in the life of our Association and our Alma Mater; give her your loyal, unstinted support and co-operation."

(This recommendation was heartily adopted by a rising vote, Mrs. Arnold, after being introduced by the acting president, thanked the Association for its action, and pledging to give of her best in filling this office and asking for the co-operation of all the members).

No. 2 That Article I of our Constitution reading "the name of our Association shall be The Alumnae Association of the Mary Baldwin Seminary" be amended, as per Article III of Constitution, at Annual meeting in 1924 to read as follows—"The name of this Association shall be Association of Alumnae and Former Students of the M. B. S."

This reading gives the literary graduates their due priority of membership and standing for all time. We have the precedent of this established by Mt. Holyoke, Wellesley and many other seminaries who changed to colleges but retained all former Alumnae and students as members of their Association.

No. 3. That we consider the action of the Association at the annual meeting in 1912 when life membership was established with a fee of $10.00 and same be amended to read as follows: "Life membership in the Association shall be continued with a fee of $25.00."

No. 4. "That the outstanding work of the Executive Committee and the Association for the coming year be the organizing of new Chapters".

No. 5. That the funds in hand left after purchasing the floral pall for Miss Strickler be added to from treasury, making the amount $50.00 this to be invested at 6 per cent for an annual prize known as "The V. M. Strickler Latin prize" to be given each year in the fourth year Latin Class of the Mary Baldwin Seminary, for best metrical translation of a given portion of Ovid or Virgil. The acting treasurer to have this matter in charge from year to year."

These recommendations are presented with motion that same be considered seriatim, with discussion and then voted upon.

Respectfully submitted,
ANNE HOTCHKISS-HOWISON,
Acting President

These recommendations were duly presented, considered on motion and adopted according to the above motion— i. e. seriatim, with discussion, adopted singly, then as a whole.

(Since the business meeting several members have expressed a desire to make individual contributions toward the "V. M. Strickler Latin prize." If any readers of the Bulletin wish to do this, please send check to the Association Treasurer. It would be fine if the amount of $50.00 could be raised to $100.00 by next May.)

REPORT GIVEN BY MISS HIGGINS

Madam President, Members of the Alumnae Association of the Mary Baldwin Seminary, and members of the Reunion Classes:

As this may be called "The End of an Era," I incorporated in my annual report to the Board of Trustees not only the record for the session 1922-23, but also a statement of the present condition of the school and suggestions for the future development of the College. I am using a part of that material in this report.

I was elected Principal of Mary Baldwin Seminary May 1, 1916. I wish to express my deep appreciation of the honor conferred upon me, and also to tell you of the joy that has come to me in devoting my best efforts to the continuation of the work so nobly begun by Miss Baldwin and so ably carried on by Miss Weimar.

The total number of students enrolled for the session of 1922-23 is three hundred and forty-four, showing an increase in the enrollment of nearly thirty-three and one-third per cent since the close of the session of 1915-16. Exclusive of the Graded Department, about one third of the new students registered for the session of 1922-23 are high school graduates. The above statements indicate the enlarging influence of the school. Many of the high school graduates are poorly prepared in Latin and the Modern Languages, and for this reason they are making up conditions in preparatory work at the same time that they are doing collegiate work. Other high school graduates did not apply for the Junior College diploma, but came here for the specific purpose of taking courses in Music, Art, Expression, Physical Education or Domestic Science. A big percentage of the students enrolled for this year are taking a preponderance of college work. The collegiate students in English number ninety-eight; collegiate history, sixty-seven; the Latin Department numbers one hundred and twenty-six, twenty-four taking collegiate Latin; the French Department, one hundred and fifty-three; the Spanish and Italian Departments total twenty-six; the Mathematics Department includes one hundred and twenty-four, thirty-one taking college mathematics; the Science Department, consisting of Physics and Chemistry, is filled, many students having been refused admission to that department on account of limited space; the Domestic Science, Voice, and Commercial Departments have a capacity enrollment; the Piano Department shows a distinct loss. As the number enrolled for literary work increases, the number for special work naturally decreases. Gymnastics, swimming, and outdoor sports continue to receive due attention, and the Athletic Association is a recognized force for general development. The indoor gymnasium work is far from satisfactory on account of limited space and inadequate gymnasium equipment. We use the court, upper terraces, and porches as an open-air gymnasium for setting-up exercises before breakfast. Physical examinations and mental tests are given during the year.

Covering a period of the past five years the Mary Baldwin has been presented by forty or more students at various universities and colleges. Many other students have attended conservatories, art schools, and Bible training schools, etc. Many of these students and also many Mary Baldwin students who have taken no additional training have been engaged in teaching, executive work in large schools, hospitals, social service, journalism, Y. W. C. A. work, home and foreign missions, Chautauquas, and war work. Those who attended the Mary Baldwin more than five years ago are established in many occupations and professions. On account of the impossibility of obtaining a complete record of each student, I am not able to give the above report in exact numbers. We have a record of three hundred and ten Mary Baldwin girls who have been married since 1916, of this number one hundred and thirty have been in attendance since 1916. Some of these, who have married ministers, have become literally pastor's assistants. We point with great pride to the contribution which the Mary Baldwin Seminary has made to the home life of America as well as to its achievements in other avenues of usefulness.

The number of graduates from the Literary Department of the Mary Baldwin from May, 1866, to May, 1923, will be one hundred and fifty-seven. Graduation from the Special Departments was not recognized until 1874. From that date to May, 1923, the number of Piano graduates is one hundred and sixty-six; Voice graduates from 1891 to May, 1923, will number thirty-nine; postgraduates in Piano, Organ, Voice, and Expression number twenty-two. The number entered for graduation in 1924 in the Literary Department is five, and the number of specials eighteen. Notwithstanding the fact that since 1916 rigid entrance requirements have been met by all students who have completed the Junior College Course, the number of literary graduates has steadily increased. By reference to the catalogue you will find these interesting and encouraging figures; From 1883 to 1893 we had fourteen graduates; from 1893 to 1903, twenty-two; from 1903 to 1913, twenty-four; from 1913 to 1923, thirty-one; making a total of ninety-one during the past forty years. On the other hand while that course represents literary subjects only, the special diploma in such subjects as Art, Expression, or Music represents a fair knowledge of certain literary subjects. Certificates have been awarded to those completing the College-preparatory Course and the prescribed work in Domestic Science, Shorthand, Typewriting, Bookkeeping, Harmony and History of Music, Physical Education, and for the completion of certain subjects from the prescribed literary course. On account of thorough work and careful attention to detail, the Mary Baldwin has received gratifying recognition from a number of well-established colleges and universities.

A well-selected Library consisting of 6,532 volumes has been catalogued according to the Library of Congress system. The work of cataloguing was begun September 1, 1919, by a trained librarian, who has succeeded in doing this work at the same time that she presided over the library. Nine hundred and forty-eight volumes have been added during these three years. This amount includes the gift of the Waddell collection of one hundred and thirty-three volumes. Twenty-five of the leading magazines and newspapers are regularly subscribed for. The Library is presided over by the librarian or her assistant from nine o'clock in the morning until nine at night. The reserve shelves are open to students at all times.

Faculty government has been maintained. Great attention has been paid to the development of the students in initiative and self-government within the school. The intra-mural liberties and privileges are many, but without the walls the protection of the students has been carefully supervised. The location of the dormitories is such that constant care has been exercised to shield the student from yielding to the temptations that come from without. All regulations are explained carefully at the opening of the session, and from time to time in my chapel talks I bring certain important rules to the attention of the whole school. To secure uniformity in the observance of these rules, we have certain printed forms for the students and also for the members of the faculty. While at times students may be restive under restraint, we provide a reasonable amount of wholesome recreation so that their life may be well balanced. I have noticed the increasing amount of satisfaction that patrons derive from the fact that we continue to exercise discipline, and we rarely have a visitor at the house who does not remark upon the joyous spirit of the students. We are also grateful for the happiness of the students and for the expression of their pride in their Alma Mater and their loyalty to her.

All secret societies were voluntarily abolished by the students about eight or nine years ago, and in the place of these societies a splendid group of organizations has become a real power for the development of the students and for promoting pleasant, dignified, and profitable social, educational and religious activities. These student activities, including all extra-curriculum work, have become so thoroughly organized that we have found it wise to use the point system for honors, no student holding more than one major office. The president of the Y. W. C. A. is allowed ten points; the president of the Athletic Association, eight points; and all other offices are evaluated on the same plan. This arrangement has been highly satisfactory, giving from forty to fifty students a fine opportunity for training in executive work every year. Each society has an advisory member from the faculty. The girls have community singing twice a week, and current events are presented by the students to the school twice a week. This year we have introduced the system of faculty advisors, assigning ten students each to twenty-seven members of the faculty. The students from the Graded Department and the more mature students who come to us for special work only are not included in this division. The intention of this advisory system is largely scholastic. The student publications consist of the following: The Miscellany, edited by the Senior Literary Society; the Bluestocking, or Annual, edited by an Annual Board; the Athletic Spirit, edited by the Athletic Council. The Athletic Council, assisted by the Physical Director, looks after the distribution of cups, M. B. S. emblems, and all athletic honors.

To give you some idea of the generous effort of our students during the World War, and carried on with enthusiasm since we have returned to more normal conditions, I shall give you a brief summary of their activities from 1916 to 1918. They contributed to the Franco-Serbian Field Hospital, $100.00; to the British War Relief Association, $108.59; to the Red Cross, $166.10 in money, besides garments made by the girls from materials which cost $140.11; to the Fatherless Children of France, for the adoption of two French orphans, $129.50; to the Y. W. C. A. for its Student Friendship Fund, $1000.00. With other gifts the contributions amounted to $4,873.41. The outstanding contribution for the session of 1921-22 is $240.00 for the Woodrow Wilson Foundation Fund.

The financial report of the Y. W. C. A. submitted by the treasurer tells its own story.

1920-21	$ 869.51
1921-22	965.00
1922-23	1258.29
Total from Sept. 1920 to Jan. 15, 1923	$3093.80

The Y. W. C. A. for the third year has a 100 per cent membership. The presidency of this Association is conferred by election, and it is valued as the highest honor that can be won by a student. The students organize the Association, and plan and conduct the meetings with reverence and dignity. The meetings are held every Sunday night immediately after supper and before the school attends the services at the First Presbyterian Church. Cabinet meetings are held once a week at night, and morning watch is conducted every Thursday morning directly after breakfast. At all these meetings the students lead in prayer, read the Holy Scriptures, and unhesitatingly bring to the attention of the school the Christian standards and ideals for which the Mary Baldwin has stood so firmly. A mission study class is conducted every year directly after mid-winter examinations, and while the attendance is purely voluntary, we often have from twenty-five to fifty per cent. of the boarders in attendance. The Sunday School classes are conducted by a group of Seminary teachers every Sunday morning from ten to ten-thirty. The students are classified according to age, and the International Lessons are taught. The girls attend Divine services on the Sabbath both morning and evening, making four services on that day regularly for the students and for a majority of the members of the faculty. The interest in the foreign mission schools organized or conducted by Mary Baldwin girls is a matter of vital interest to the Seminary. The Mary Baldwin School in Korea, the Charlotte Kemper School in Brazil, the Martha Riddle School in China, and Mrs. Harnesberger's School in China, are the objects of our prayers and gifts. We have a Martha Riddle Mission Band organized at the Mary Baldwin, whose interest is directed especially to the care and continuance of the Martha Riddle School. The number of non-communicants this year is nineteen, which is about the average. The following denominations are represented: Presbyterians, Methodists, Episcopalians, Baptists, and the remaining are distributed among the Christian, Congregationalists, Reformed and Jews. The students go to their respective churches twice a month, but they attend the Presbyterian church always at night. No effort is made to bring denominational influence to bear upon students other than Presbyterian. The ministers and the congregations of other churches frequently extend courtesies to their own members and also to the whole school. Chapel services are conducted by the Rev. A. M. Fraser, Chaplain, at the opening of school five days in the week. Prayers are held regularly every day in the dining-room directly after supper. The aim of the school is to train fine, strong, Christian women.

After years of careful and persistent effort we have succeeded in securing a vigorous, highly educated, highly cultivated, and deeply consecrated faculty. We have four teachers doing exclusively college work, four with a Master's degree, seven with a Bachelor's degree, and many of these have to their credit work in advance of this degree at such universities as Hopkins, Columbia, and the University of Virginia; we have two graduates of the Mary Baldwin Seminary, who have studied at the University of Chicago and at Columbia; two Normal graduates in the Graded Department. The remaining teachers and officers are well trained, efficient men and women. We have three teachers who hold the Phi Beta Kappa key. It is worthy to note that Miss McFarland, Miss Fraser and Miss Switzer, who hold this honor were Mary Baldwin graduates before attending Cornell University. To indicate the tone of our faculty, I will call your attention to the fact that it includes five daughters of Presbyterian ministers, a daughter of an Episcopal minister, a daughter of a Reformed Bishop, and other women closely related to honored servants of the church.

The aim of the school has been to make each department the best of its kind and to cause each student to feel that she has received the greatest consideration and special personal care. While it has been our earnest desire to hold with all loyalty to the high traditions of the past, we have striven also for the larger vision and the open mind that would lead to ever increasing achievement. The purpose running through the whole organization, like a silver thread, has been to keep in mind the "things of the spirit," and we have ever kept before us the question: "Is not the life more than meat and the body than raiment?"

"The memory of the past is the inspiration of the future."

At the request of the Board of Trustees with the assistance of two members of the faculty, Miss Edith Latane, Head of the History Department, and Miss Nancy W. McFarland, Head of the Latin Department, two able women who are contributing largely to the success of the Mary Baldwin, and who have been most helpful to me as a Classification Committee, we have formulated a few suggestions looking to the reorganization of the school for a wider field of influence and a larger usefulness.

The subjects prescribed for college entrance naturally receive first attention. The Mary Baldwin has stood so firmly for thorough work and high standards that the slightest deviation from this policy might be disastrous in its results. English, Mathematics, History, Science, Latin, and a Modern Language should be continued as required entrance subjects for those desiring the Bachelor's degree. The courses prescribed for the A. B. degree could be a continuation of these subjects with some latitude allowed for electives after completing the sophomore year. If this latitude is allowed at the completion of the sophomore year, a number of new courses could be gradually introduced; such as, Political Science or Economics, Education, Greek, additional modern language courses, etc., according to the necessity arising. The science department needs extensive and expensive additions in space and equipment. For economic reasons I suggest retaining the courses in the special subjects with certain alterations, but changing the recognition for such a course from a diploma to a certificate. After the college work is firmly established, it would be wise to give credit for subjects that could not be recognized in the beginning. I suggest making Physical Training compulsory. This regulation could be enforced only by erecting a large gymnasium with modern equipment.

The teaching force for collegiate work would necessarily be increased as the present courses are broadened or other courses are added. As the lower work decreases there would naturally be a falling off of teachers for those departments; however, College-preparatory classes will have to be retained in order to provide for the day patronage which is a valuable asset in our community life. Administrative or office work, will be greatly increased. The formulation and control of the educational, social, and religious policies have come directly from the Principal's office with the assistance of one secretary. The necessity will arise with increased organization work for an increase in office force.

As there has been no building for several years, the growth of the plant and its physical equipment have not been commensurate with the educational and administrative development. For the comfortable and successful control and the enlargement of the college, I recommend an immediate expansion of the plant. I suggest tearing down the building known as Sky High and erecting a building sufficiently large to provide for a gymnasium and swimming pool, supplied with modern equipment; a floor to be used for Domestic Science and Arts and Laboratory; and one floor to provide dormitory space.

By this addition uniformity of rooms for the students can be secured. I also suggest remodeling the administration building so as to obtain more office space, space for committee rooms for students or for teachers and officers. By changing the interior of the administration building, all rooms on the first floor could be available if necessary for general social purposes. The suggestions for social reorganization and a clearly outlined course of study can be made more intelligently after a decision has been reached for the physical expansion.

I wish to express my deep appreciation of the courtesy and support of the Alumnae Association. Your sympathetic understanding of the difficulties incident to directing the affairs of a large school is one of our most valuable assets; your expressions of approval lightens our burdens, and your love brings joy to our hearts.

MARY JULIA BALDWIN

In the list of Charter members of the Beverley Manor Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, stands the name of Mary Julia Baldwin—a name that must always hold an honored place in the roll of Virginia's distinguished daughters.

Miss Baldwin's entire life was spent in Staunton, Virginia, where she was born October 4, 1829. She was the daughter of Dr. William D. Baldwin and Margaret L. Sowers but, left an orphan in her seventh year, she was lovingly reared by her mother's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Sowers. Very early in her young womanhood she felt the call to that splendid service into which she later poured so unstintedly the rich treasure of her life. With her small patrimony she furnished a room and opened a charity school for the children of her community. In 1862, after the death of her grandmother, she began a small private school in rented premises. Early in 1863, with Miss Agnes McClung, was asked to assume control of the Augusta Female Seminary, a struggling boarding-school for girls which had been established in Staunton in 1842. It was no easy task that she essayed. Grim-visaged war stalked through her beautiful Valley; its encircling hills echoed to the tramp of marching armies; want and danger often threatened the very existence of the school. But with the heroic spirit of her Revolutionary ancestors, and with an unswerving faith in the loving guidance of an Almighty God, she braved the ordeals and conquered the difficulties of those chequered years. 1880 the death of her noble colleague left Miss Baldwin sole head of the institution, and till her death in 1897, she devoted her life to its development; it was given her to see it grow in numbers, in prestige, and in power, and in 1895 by act of the Virginia Legislature it was named in her honor the Mary Baldwin Seminary.

Such is the simple story of her heroic and devoted life, with its years of quiet and steadfast service. More difficult is it to analyze her character. Men paid tribute to her strong mind, her generous heart, her practical acumen, her breadth of vision; students loved her for her sweet humility, her patience, her justice, her warm and tender sympathy. But it is in the depth and beauty of her religious life that we find the strong, though hidden springs of her influence and power; she followed Christ, she walked humbly with her God. Pestalozzi once said: "The best way for a child to learn to fear God is to see and hear a real Christian," and in many minds the mists of well-nigh half a century have not dimmed the memory of her prayers, her Bible teaching, the sincerity and earnestness of her Christian life. These things left an impress even on gay and thoughtless hearts, and have been an abiding influence on many a life.

Staunton guards her dust in Thornrose Cemetery—God's Acre Beautiful. At each Commencement season, Alumnae gather around the simple shaft that marks her resting-place, leave flowers for remembrance, and speak her name in grateful reverence. But her noblest monument is on a neighboring hillside, in the great school which bears her name and counts the memories of her life a precious heritage. It still holds distinguished rank among the schools of our Southland; with growing plant and curriculum broadening to meet the challenge of the years it still is honored for sincere and thorough work; and still with each fresh year sends out a new generation of "Baldwin girls," trained in heart nad mind for lives of brave, efficient service.

CONDENSED CHAPTER REPORTS

Atlanta Chapter

Met April 12th, 1923, with Bettie Lockridge-Rogers as hostess, representatives from classes ranging from 1870 to 1921 present, nine new members added. Usual business transacted and followed by full discussion of changes at M. B. S. Mrs. Lizzie Hanger-Chalenor appointed delegate to annual meeting of the Association. A challenge was sent to the Association as follows:

"The Atlanta Chapter will be responsible for the sum of $1000 toward an endowment fund for the Missionary Scholarship if the Association will raise not less than $9,000 within a given time to be determined at the annual meeting." A second meeting was called to further discuss plans for meeting the obligation of $1000, if accepted by the Association and ended in adopting the following plan: "The Atlanta Chapter will raise within the year the stated amount of $1000, one hundred of which is already collected and placed in the bank at 6 per cent until the full amount is raised."

(The matter of accepting this challenge of the Atlanta Chapter has been referred to the Executive Committee of the Association.)

New York Chapter

The annual luncheon was held March 17, 1923, at Waldorf Hotel. New officers were elected, and the roll was called in an effort to correct the list of members. The report from the Executive Committee was read, announcing the establishing of a Class A College, beginning with the session of 1923-24.

"This report was exceedingly gratifying and seemed the beginning of the fulfillment of a vision held dear by each alumna of the Seminary. There is now, indeed, reason for renewed enthusiasm and greater growth for every chapter of the Mary Baldwin Seminary Alumnae Association."

Washington Chapter

(Miss Ella Moore was the representative of the Washington Chapter present at the meeting).

The Washington Chapter sent warm greetings to the Association and confirmed the loyalty of its members to the Association and Seminary. The chapter expressed its interest in the establishing of a college and its confirmed interest in the Missionary Scholarship.

Knoxville Chapter

Met April 11, 1923, at home of chairman, Mrs. Mary Andes-Dooley. Officers elected and amount raised for this year's contribution toward Missionary Scholarship.

Members present were asked to stand while the names of the members who had died during the year were read:

Miss Blanche Shanholtzer, '97.
Mrs. Agnes Wood-Compton, '14.
Mrs. Mary Coalter-McAllister, '76.

NEW BUSINESS

The nominating committee is as follows:

Miss Bessie Wallace Landes, chairman, Staunton, Va.
Miss Nora Fraser, Staunton, Va.
Mrs. Janet Wilson Sterrett, Staunton, Va.
Mrs. Mary Trotter Wilbourne, Buena Vista, Va.
Mrs. Mary Sterrett Irvine, Charlottesville, Va.

Memorial services at Miss Baldwin's grave to be held Sunday, 4 p. m. Mrs. Nettie Dubose Junkin in charge. Flowers to be placed on Miss Strickler's grave as well as Miss Baldwin's.

The corresponding secretary was asked to write a note to Miss Weimar thanking her for her flowers and greetings to the Association. Messages were also sent to members of the Association who were ill at the time of the meeting.

A vote of thanks was given to Mrs. Howison for her excellent work and reports, and this was followed by a few words by the new president.

Miss Nannie Tate honored us by her presence and a message of love and good will.

Mrs. Nettie Dubose Junkin told us a bit of her work in China and also about another Baldwin girl who is doing missionary work, Josie Wood.

The visiting alumnae and officers were asked to meet that afternoon at four, when cars were furnished to take them to the site of the new college and places of interest in Staunton. An invitation was extended to attend the Alumnae banquet that evening at eight o'clock.

There being no further business, the 29th annual meeting of the Mary Baldwin Seminary Alumnae Association was declared adjourned.

Alumnae Banquet

On Friday evening, May 25th, a banquet was held in the Seminary dining room which was artistically decorated in the school colors, white and yellow, and baskets of lovely flowers.

The guests were met in the parlor by Miss Higgins, Mrs. Arnold, and Mrs. Howison.

The guests were the members of the Association, members of the reunion classes, Faculty, Trustees, Seniors, Juniors, and members of the Senior Domestic Science Class. It is interesting to note that including the classes whose reunion were held this Commencement, that each class from 1865-1922 has had a reuion at the Seminary during the past ten years.

Mrs. Howison introduced the new president, Mrs. Reba Andrews-Arnold who acted as toastmistress.

"FAIR HARBOR"

Madam President, Members of the Alumnae Association of the Mary Baldwin Seminary, Members of the Reunion Classes, the Board of Trustees, and Visitors:

Another period of two years has elapsed. Again the Mary Baldwin Seminary turns from the care of her youngest daughters to devote a precious day to the dear daughters of other days who have come home to her. It is the joyous privilege of the Principal of the Mary Baldwin Seminary to dispense its traditional hospitality and so now personally and officially I greet you all and extend to you a glad, glad welcome—To the Alumnae, our pride for whose sake and in whose honor we are assembled here—To the Seniors who have today been added to the Alumnae and whom the Alma Mater can love no less as her grown-up daughters than she did when they needed her protecting care—To the Juniors, our dear children who have discarded their little white frocks and who for the first time have been admitted to the family table—To the officers and members of the faculty whose earnestness, efficiency and ability contribute so largely to the success of the Mary Baldwin, and especially do I heartily welcome the Board of Trustees, old friends and new, those to whom we owe so much in the past and to whom we look for so much more in the future.

There is one subject tonight that is uppermost in the minds of us all and shall we not for a few moments talk of it here together? The change that is taking place in the Seminary. We have faced changes and crises before. It seems to me that during the years of my administration, seven in number, each year has brought some special condition or emergency. In 1917, came our entrance into the World War. In 1918, we recall the long dreary days of quarantine which more than once lengthened into weeks of anxiety, the difficulty in securing officers and teachers, the breaking down of old standards and the absence of new, form a rapid survey of unparalleled difficulties. However, we are very much alive today, and no doubt much stronger from the rigid training. These things were more or less external. Today it is different. The change is in the organism itself. May I borrow an illustration from a subject that has been a long cherished hope of mine to add to the curriculum of the Mary Baldwin? Will you turn back to your text-books with me and recall the process by which certain tiny cells reproduce themselves? First, you have one complete cell surrounded by the cell wall and containing a nucleus. Presently the nucleus changes its shape, threads finally break in the middle, while the cell itself lengthens to meet the new demand. Then you have your elongated cell with two clearly marked nuclei within it. They have moved apart as far as circumstances allow, although both are still within the original cell wall. But this is a temporary condition. Gradually the cell elongates further, breaks apart, and you have two entirely separate cells, each perfect, with its own nucleus.

Is not this what is happening to our honored school? It was one institution, complete in itself, although it contained the possibility of development into two. There has been the college-preparatory school and there has been the Junior College with its three years of splendid College work beyond High School grade. Now the time has come for further development and slowly or gradually is this expansion beginning. This spring, instead of one catalogue, there are two—one labelled "Mary Baldwin Seminary," one "Mary Baldwin College." The Seminary one is the familiar white and gold, the College one is a severe, academic grey. But they are not so distinct as they look. The magic shield which is your birth right adorns the cover of both. The Board of Trustees appears in both, and all of the officers and some of the faculty are common to both. The College-preparatory courses belong only in the Seminary catalogue, and certain new courses and some members of the faculty, belong only to the College and appear only in the College catalogue. So are the greater number of College Courses, because, while they belong to the College, yet they have to appear in the Seminary catalogue which is a record of work done in the Seminary during the past year. The special subjects and special teachers appear in both, for many of our special students are of College grade. Thus, we have two nuclei, Preparatory School and College, separate to some extent and moving farther apart, and yet connected by many, many threads, and both within the same cell wall, that is, in the same plant.

This temporary, transition state, is difficult and puts a great strain on the organism. Are we one or two? Complications arise at every turn, and at every turn the effort to differentiate them is made greater by the fact that the two nuclei are within one wall, that is, one group of buildings. The College girls must be in a dormitory to themselves. But what if there are a few more or less than one building or two buildings can hold? Some may have to share a building with preparatory girls, because we have no vacant rooms now, have not had for years, and we cannot afford to have any.

It would be desirable for the College students to have a dining-room to themselves, but we have one crowded dining-room for College girls, the younger girls, and the faculty.

The College students ought to have greater freedom in the library, but the younger girls, with their less scholarly ways, must be there too, using the same dictionaries, same encyclopedias and many, many other books.

The laboratories have for some years been so crowded that the work of the science department has been seriously handicapped. Its achievements have been possible only by the most laborious and systematic management, and the department must now expand with practically the same space and with the addition of considerable equipment.

Again, all colleges have class periods of one hour, preparatory schools usually have periods of forty-five minutes. We shall have to maintain both in one academic building.

The social life will be hampered by lack of space in the dormitories. All the dormitory rooms are used as bed-rooms and are now filled. The college girls have no living-rooms or parlors except the ones in the main building, shared with the younger girls.

So you see, as the nuclei separate and move apart, the old cell wall is subjected to a terrible tension and strain as the breaking point approaches.

These are a few of the problems which we, officers and faculty, are facing and trying to solve. They are temporary difficulties. They will vanish when the beautiful new buildings rise on the new campus. But when will that be? A year or five years or more?

Meantime the College will go on right here, and the world will watch and form judgments of it. This is a large order we are called upon to fill.

As I said, we have met crises before, and we are not daunted. We hope to meet our difficulties with dignity and ingenuity, and wisdom, and courage. But you see the difficulties. I have dwelt on them for a purpose. If your Alma Mater has wanted and needed your love and loyalty before, does she not need it doubly in this period of transition? Whatever the future has in store, let me urge you, the devoted and loyal daughters of the Mary Baldwin Seminary, to keep your allegiance to her, but at the same time to look out upon broader fields and give the same love and devotion to the Mary Baldwin College. For your Alma Mater, I appeal to you now. For the sake of her great past, for the sake of her great future, give her your interest, your sympathy, your devotion, your loyalty, NOW.

"THE KINGDOM AROUND THE CORNER"

Madam President, Ladies of the Alumnae Association and other friends. The subject upon which I am asked to speak is "The Kingdom Around the Corner." The Kingdom Around the Corner is Mary Baldwin College. I feel that this is a momentous occasion because of the information and influence that will go out from it to the friends of this institution scattered throughout the country. I am deeply sensible of the responsibility which rests upon me in attempting to make a proper statement of the case.

Other papers, that will be read this evening, deal with the history of the school, its spirit and its achievements in the past. Let us look for a moment at the Seminary as it is at the present, and as we are about to convert it into a college. Miss Baldwin brought the Seminary to the point of undisputed leadership in the education of women in the South. Her name was better known than that of Staunton itself. She enjoyed the friendship of the most distinguished men in the South in her day. The school continued to expand and improve after her decease. Students were drawn from every state in the Union and from foreign countries. About ten years ago, chiefly through the inspiration of the Alumnae Association, it was made a Junior College, though the fact was recognized at that time by the authorities that the school was doing three years of college work instead of two. But we stressed the thoroughness of instruction and lofty ideals of womanhood, rather than a higher classification in the scale of institutions of learning. Wherever our students have gone to col eges and universities, full recognition of our work has been accorded and most gratifying commendations have been received. It may seem bold to those who do not know the facts, to say that there is no school in all the land that stands higher in its scholarship and discipline than this one does. But the facts will amply justify that claim. The desire to change the seminary into a college does not come from any dissatisfaction with the quality of the work done or the character of the school.

The danger with us lay in the fact that human nature is too easily satisfied with having done merely a good thing. There is a recognized tendency in the human heart to be content with a limited thing, because it is a thoroughly good thing. This is expressed in a familiar proverb, "The good is often the worst enemy of the best." Because we have had preeminent success in a circumscribed sphere, the ambition for still better things is atrophied. The same tendency is recognized in the expression "resting upon one's laurels." An incident from the War Between the States will illustrate the thing I speak of. A force of Confederate troops fell upon a Federal camp and gained a splendid victory, driving the enemy away in great confusion and capturing a well provided camp. The commander was urged by his subordinates to pursue the fleeing enemy and clinch the victory. His reply was "There has been glory enough for one day." As they relaxed and gave themselves up to the enjoyment of their victory, the Federal force rallied and came back with a tremendous blow, and caught them unawares and drove them in defeat and confusion for a hundred miles. There is never glory enough when more glory can be reached. Have we not in the past been deceived by the thought that Mary Baldwin had glory enough without any further advance?

About three years ago, an experience came to me that is suggestive of a prophetic vision. The prophet Zechariah said, "The angel waked me, as a man that is wakened out of his sleep." He did not say that he had been asleep, but he had been in a condition that resembled sleep. Sleep has been some time described as a quiescence of some of the intellctual faculties. The prophet had his usual power of observation and of reasoning, but he had not seen the significance of the facts about him. It was so that I was awakened out of my partial sleep. For twenty-five years, prominent peop e have urged me to make an effort to convert Mary Baldwin Seminary into a college. My reply has always been that we preferred to fill the station, which in the providence of God, we had already carved out for ourselves, the creation of a high type of womanly character and the imparting of sound and thorough learning without aspiring to a higher classification. The whole scene shifted in my view. May I te l you some of the things revealed to me in that vision?

First, I discovered there was a vast number of young women in the South demanding a college education, but with only a limited provision to meet that demand. I may cite the case of one standard college for women without calling its name? This college closes its enrollment in the month of February each year, and by that time they have registered all that they can take. Do you suppose that after the month of February there are no more app ications for admission to that college? It is almost certain that applications not only continue, but increase in number throughout the seven months before the opening of the college in the fall. Do you suppose for a moment that the young women who have failed to enter such colleges accept the disappointment as final and make no further effort to secure a col.ege education? Or do they seek admission to other colleges? The probability is that there are few, if any of those, who have failed to enter the best colleges who have abandoned the ambition for a college education. They have gone somewhere. It is not hard to trace them up and find the institutions to which they have resorted.

Second, I saw in that vision the doubtful and even dangerous conditions in a large percentage of the colleges and universities to which our girls were going. And now I speak not from the inference or specu ation, nor from the testimony of others, but from my personal knowledge of the facts, when I say that young women who ought to have been provided with greater college facilities of the right kind have gone to institutions where the foundations of true philosophy and religion are assailed. Some of these have become the victims of Roman Catholocism, Christian Science, materialistic Philosophy and destructive teachings concerning the Word of God. By our failure to provide for these, we are responsible for these appal ing results.

Third, I saw in that vision the daring, dauntless spirit of aspiration and achievement which Miss Baldwin always displayed. She never allowed anything in the realm of education in the South to surpass what she offered. Mr. Joseph Addison Waddell, who was her advisor and who knew her better than any other human being, often told me that Miss Baldwin's daring was appalling to him at times. He would say to her, "Miss Ba dwin, how can you possibly do that?" She would answer him with deference, but go ahead and do the daring thing she had proposed. Were she living today and in the prime of her altruistic and dauntless spirit, I think there could be no question that she would have made Mary Baldwin the commanding woman's college of the South.

Fourth, I waked up to a sense of my personal responsibility for the failure to develop more than we had done. For a long whi e, I thought of myself merely as one of the members of the Board of Trustees and as its presiding officer, seeing they needed a presiding officer, but without any other influence or responsibility than that which all the trustees share and share alike. But I came to realize that the school and the trustees were giving me a leadership that I had not suspected. If, therefore, the school had failed to retain its primacy, no one was so responsible for this fai ure as myself. I do not say this in the spirit of boasting, on the contrary with a profound sense of regret that I had let pass by so much of golden opportunity.

In the fifth place, the question of the source from which the necessary funds were to be derived for the conversion of the Seminary into a college had to be considered. There are three sources from which funds are derived for such purposes. The first of these is private donations. The Alumnae Association had urged upon us a movement for the collecting of an endowment fund. I am afraid they grew very impatient with us. They said some hard things about us at different times and called us some names, but that is all right. I assure you we trustees do not cherish any resentment. After a man has passed through several meetings of the General Assemb y of the Presbyterian Church, as I have done, and has been in the scrimmage over Organic Union, and the Federal Council and the Chinese Encyclopedia and the Woman Question, what the Alumnae said about the trustees sounds much like the caresses of affection, like the love strokes of a friend. At last, in reaction to the urging of the Alumnae, I proposed to the trustees that they consent to my making an appeal to a venerable lady of large means who was very generous in her donations to everything of a benevolent character. With their consent, I prepared the best letter I knew how, using the strongest arguments and a l the persuasions consistent with self respect and with my regard for the dignity of Mary Baldwin Seminary. I received a very cordial and considerate letter in reply. The honored woman said that the demands of the war (then in progress) upon her resources and sympathies were so great that she could not at that time turn aside to any institution of learning that was doing its work so well. Thus ended the only attempt Mary Baldwin Seminary ever made to get contributions of any sort for carrying on her work.

Another source from which education funds are derived is the aid of the State. That, of course, was out of the question in this case.

The third source is the Church. I had always been opposed to the control of secular education by the Church. My opposition was based upon principle. But there are different kinds of principles. There are principles for which one should die, if necessary; and there are other principles for which one should fight, but for which he need not make any great sacrifices. It is this latter kind of principle involved in this case. I found that the whole Church was committing itself to Church control of education, and that the time had come when church people were wary of giving their money for institutions that were not under ecclesiastical control.

Take Hampden-Sidney for example. Although the relationship of that college to the Synod of Virginia was just as close as it could be without being under the direct control of the Church, the trustees found themselves unable to raise even $100,000 within the Synod for its endowment. When the college was put directly under the Synod's control, it received between $300,000 and $400,000 of endowment, and an annual contribution to its maintenance of about $20,000. Within the five years from the time of that change, the student body has become three times as large as it was before.

I therefore turned in my thoughts to the Church, as the only source from which we could expect the large sums of money necessary for the creation of the college. I proposed it to the Board of Trustees and they offered to transfer the Seminary to the ownership and control of the Synod of Virginia on condition that the Synod would raise a half-million dollars for it and contribute the interest on this half-million dollars annually until the principal was raised. The Chamber of Commerce of Staunton and Augusta County offered to raise $100,000 more, if the Synod should accept our offer, and it did accept it. I wish I could picture to you the enthusiasm in the Synod and the many hand shakes and congratulations I received in the Synod; and on my way home and at Staunton on my arrival. One of the most inspiring commendations I received was a postal card from a venerable lady in the Southwest, who had graduated here, and had conducted a seminary of her own with great success for many years. The sentiment was like this "Congratulations upon the college," signed by "The second oldest graduate of the Seminary." I thought to myself, "There is the true spirit of Miss Baldwin." This venerable lady with all her experience and education is just as ardent for the change as the most bouyant and courageous graduate of 1923.

We have now purchased a beautiful piece of property of two hundred acres as the permanent home of the college that has fairly captured the community of Staunton.

Miss Higgins, in the paper she read to you this evening, has set before you some of the many and very serious difficulties confronting us in this work. I am very glad, indeed, that she has done that.

We ought to count the cost. We ought not to allow our enthusiasm to lead us into any venture, however, dazzling it may be, without facing the obstacles and difficulties in the most thorough going and business like manner. She closed her paper with an appeal to your courage and confidence in meeting the difficulties of the situation. It is that closing thought which I would like now to elaborate, and have you set side by side with the difficulties she has mentioned.

A great hero is not daunted by difficulties but is only spurred to greater courage and effort. What would have been the result had Columbus listened to the discouragements or had heeded the tremendous difficulties with which his venture was beset—one man against the world? What would have become of the transatlantic cable, or all the long distance electric communications that have grown out of it, had Field been daunted by the skepticism of his cotemporaries or by difficulties?

Throughout the land zeal for education has been revived and is in a perfect ferment. Nearly, if not quite all of our Synods have their colleges. Sometimes they are spoken of in a slighting way as "Synodical Colleges," as though they were characterized more by ambition than by genuineness of work. If I thought these colleges had attained already their fullest development and were all that their promoters intend to make them, I too would share that want of perfect respocet for them. But such is not the case. Their present limited development is not an arrested development, they are merely in the stage of their growth. Those who are conducting them and those who are behind them, have the noblest and most laudable goal before them. They intend to make them first-class colleges and they are straining all their resources to push them forward to the highest standard. That I admire. And now as we consider this forward movement all along the line ought we too have been content with lagging behind because of mere difficulties? Shall we not, in the true Mary Baldwin spirit, see that the banner of our college, like the white plume of Navarre, shall be found in the lead whereever the fighting is the fiercest, and the difficulties are the greatest? I, for one, am not willing to believe that we have not brains enough in the Synod of Virginia to do what others have done and are doing, and do it better than others. I am not willing to believe that our Principal and Business Manager have not the ability to solve the problems that others have solved. May I say at this point, that notwithstanding of all my knowledge of Miss Higgins and her able administration, I have been filled with fresh admiration by the grasp of the situation she has shown and the ability with which she has solved all problems thus far. As for Mr. King, see what he has done in the last twenty-five years. I once quoted in a sermon Samuel Johnson's advice, "Drink cold water, and go in for a hundred years." After the sermon, Mr. King came to me and said, "That's exactly my philosophy, 'Drink cold water, and go in for a hundred years' ". So we have a lease on Mr. King for fifty years more, and if he will do twice as much in this fifty years as he has done in the past twenty-five years, we do not need to be disturbed by difficulties.

I would that a clarion challenge might go out from this commencement that would stir the Mary Baldwin blood in every Mary Baldwin woman throughout this land, that organization may be affected and an unconquerable spirit generated that will lead to triumph. Where there are no chapters, let chapters be formed; where there are only units, let each unit thrill with the electric current of loyalty and enthusiasm.

May I draw an illustration of this truth from a convenient source and one familiar to myself?

A few years ago, I proposed to one of the woman's organizations of my church, the Ladies' Aid Society, to raise $500, half of the amount needed for the founding of a scholarship at Banner Elk in honor of Miss Fannie K. Taylor, one of our members, who had labored there for fifteen years. They were all startled at first and thought it impossible. Then they suddenly reversed their judgment about it and said they could do it and would. I found $300 from individuals to add to it and hoped the church might assume the other $200. Because of a very heavy budget, the church could not assume it. Then one day it suddenly occurred to the Ladies' Aid Society that they could give the whole amount and could give it all at once without spreading it out over a term of years. Having once become conscious of their power, they accomplished it in a very few months. If that society could raise a thousand dollars in so short a time, could not the Staunton Chapter of the Mary Baldwin Alumnae raise at least that much or double that amount in the course of four or five years, within which time the Synod's pledge would be maturing? My absolute confidence is that all that is necessary to make the institution a success, is that we shall believe in it and dedicate ourselves to it and pray for it and trust in the favor of Almighty God and in the loyalty of the people of God. Let us silence every note of skepticism, and suppress every doubt. We have crossed the Rubicon, we have burned our bridges behind us. Whether we have done wisely or unwisely, whether we have been right or wrong, the college is now an accomplished fact, and there is no retreat from it. The only way that is open to us is to the front. There the paths divide. One path leads by doubt and discouragement and criticism, straight to disaster. The other path leads by confidence, by faith, by prayer, by indomitable perseverence over every obstacle, to a brilliant and matchless success. Let us therefore get together and make a long pull, and a strong pull, and a pull altogether and place Mary Baldwin Co lege in its rightful position—at the apex of the education of women in the South. This is "The Kingdom Around the Corner."

OUTLINE OF HISTORY

Madam President, Ladies and Gentlemen:

I appreciate the honor shown me in being selected to represent the faculty; and will agree that if it is a case of age before beauty, or wit, I have the right to be spokesman, having been a member of the faculty for nearly thirty years; seven with Miss Baldwin, fourteen with Miss Weimar and seven with Miss Higgins.

To be intimately associated with such a body of women, is a privilege rarely enjoyed by many mortals. Time is too short to tell of their work and influence; Eternity alone can do that.

The subject given me was an "Outline of History" of the Seminary up to the Civil War, which proves they think me even older than I am. But, as old Dr. Pollock said to his son when asked to speak a piece "Hit or miss try it, Tommy" so I will try it with the help of Mr. Waddell's History of Mary Baldwin Seminary. In the summer of 1842, the Reverend Rufus Bailey, whose picture hangs in the Seminary Parlors, came to Staunton looking for a place to establish a high grade Seminary for girls; the suggestion was well received by the Presbyterians of Staunton and after due consideration the constitution of the Augusta Female Seminary was adopted, the objects being to afford a thorough literary and Christian education for the girls of this portion of the country to be owned and controlled by a self perpetuating Board of Trustees, who would manage the funds and promote the interests of the institution. Mr. Bailey was elected Principal and his wife assistant.

The school was conducted for some months in the upper rooms of a frame house on the southwest corner of New Street and Court-House Alley, it was then moved to a large frame house on Greenville Avenue, near the present Gas Works. They had a prosperous session and the next year the Trustees decided to erect a suitable building for the Seminary on the Church lot, permission having been granted by the Trustees of the Church.

At this time there were sixty pupils of whom Miss Mary Julia Baldwin was one.

In 1844 the corner stone was laid of the main part of the present Administration Building, the two wings being added later. Between the administration of Mr. Bailey and our present principal, the Rev. Samuel Mathews, Rev. Wm. Campbell, Rev. Wm. Brown, Mr. Wm. Marquiss, Mr. John Tinsley, Miss Baldwin, and Miss Weimar held the power in turn.

When I first came to the Augusta Female Seminary (as it was then called) there were no telephones or electric bells, if we wanted a doctor we had to run down town for him. Neither gymnastics nor cooking had so prominent a place in the life of the school, indeed the latter was so discouraged that even maiden efforts at making candy over the gas jet in a tin bucket were ruthlessly stopped by any member of the faculty who found it out.

Now the praises of the well trained Domestic Science girls are sung by all who have partaken of their delicious dinners and luncheons.

That brings to mind the fact that I have not presented for the present Faculty our appreciation of the invitation to be present at this delightful banquet which is not only a feast of good things to eat, but if you will pardon a hackneyed quotation "A feast of reason and a flow of soul."

So many gifted daughters have paid their literary tributes to Miss Baldwin, Miss Riddle, Miss Strickler, Miss Wright and others of the long ago that there is nothing for me to add, but I would like to pay a token of loving appreciation to one, whose work for the school and for the girls was so quietly and unobstrusively carried on for thirty-two years, that only those who were intimately associated with her, knew its extent and value. Always taking the lowest place—dear Miss Streit—will be one to say "When saw I Thee an hungered and fed Thee or thirsty and gave Thee drink or sick or in prison and ministered unto Thee" and hear the blessed "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these ye have done it unto me."

I drink to Miss Anna Streit.

"THE MAN OF PROPERTY"

The Mary Baldwin Seminary, in the future, will be under the control of the Mary Baldwin College, and I feel that a statement of the many changes made during the past quarter of a century, and since the death of our honored and dearly beloved Miss Mary Julia Baldwin, the real builder of your alma mater, will be of interest to you.

I wonder how many present could recall with any degree of accuracy the condition of the grounds and buildings twenty-five years ago? In order to refresh our memories and enable us to make a comparison, we must draw a picture in our minds of existing conditions at that time. First, we will take the grounds and second, the buildings and equipment.

At that time, the front fence was of the old picket style on a dry stone foundation with arches over the entrances and over the steps on the terraces leading up to the front porch. The arches were covered with vines and very attractive. The front lawn was a Lovely Mary flower garden with one small and two large fountains filled with goldfish—a wonderful place for bullfrogs to while away the evening hours. At that time we had some stately elm trees around Hill Top, but they have succumbed to the ravages of time. The old icehouse stood on the ground now used for tennis courts. The old class rooms were in the center of the present quadrangle. On the right hand side going up to Hill Top, the hot house was near the old covered way and just in the rear of Little Chapel Hall. The old Infirmary was to the right of the hothouse. Miss Baldwin had her apartment in the building known as Brick House. Miss Strickler's building was just in the rear of the back gallery. The building between my present office, the old library, and the dining room was the housekeeper's home.

With the consent of our President, Dr. Fraser, I will present a condensed report of the financial condition of your alma mater when it was transferred to the Synod of Virginia. This report covers a period of twenty-five years and six months.

I will now name the new buildings in the order in which they were constructed.

First, Memorial Hall; second, the addition to Hill Top; third, Agnes McClung Hall; fourth, Academic Building, in which are located our class rooms, library, laboratories, and practice rooms on the third floor. On the ground floor of this building, we have the kitchen, bake shop, dairy and pantries. Fifth, the addition to Sky High, including a new gymnasium and swimming pool. Sixth, the new Infirmary which occupies the space between Sky High and the Academic Building. Seventh, the large, well ventilated galleries in the rear of the Main building, which affords us an easy entrance to the Chapel. We have also a new covered way from the Academic Building to Agnes McClung Hall. Eighth, new boiler and coal house with room above for laundry which has a good equipment. Two boilers have been added to the heating equipment, one tubular boiler of 125 horse power and one 40 horse power that is used for heating the swimming pool and furnishes hot water for the entire place. We added this year an additional one thousand gallon tank for hot water which gives us two thousand gallons. Ninth, new dormitory for maids on the east side of Market street, just across from the boiler house. This building is well equipped with parlor, baths, etc., and heated from the main plant. The dining room has been restored to its original size by taking out the kitchen and bake shop which occupied at least one-third of its space. The old picket fence around the Seminary grounds has been replaced by a handsome stone wall which adds much to the dignity of the property.

All the old floors throughout the buildings have been replaced by hardwood floors. We have installed throughout the buildings program clocks, fire alarm and inter-phone systems, which contribute largely to the convenience and safety of the plant. We have also added fire escapes.

It is difficult to estimate the value of the Seminary Farm to the School, as it furnishes for nearly three months in the fall all kinds of fresh vegetables, fruits, etc., for a household of about two hundred and sixty-five people, and in addition potatoes for the entire session, and the winter and spring vegetables. We use a part of the farm for the athletic field for golf, baseball, basketball, tennis and hockey. We also have two tennis courts on the campus to the east of Hill Top. The athletic field is rented to a dairyman for three months for $125.00. We derive a profit of about $300.00 per year from hogs kept at the farm to consume the slop from the Seminary. The house at the farm is rented to Miss Butler, the daughter of Miss Baldwin's gardener, a valued employee who was with her for thirty years, at the nominal sum of $10.00 per month. The fact that we have our own fresh vegetables for our school is worth in advertising not less than a thousand dollars a year.

Two years ago we purchased Rose Terrace, the large brick house and grounds north of Hill Top, and recently a lot on Market Street from W. L. Sams. Both properties were paid for out of the current funds with the exception of $1000.00 still due on the Sams lot.

We have forty-five pianos and one organ and practically all new furniture throughout the buildings, with the exceptions of some very valuable old pieces of antique furniture left by Miss Baldwin, which I had restored. These improvements have been made at a cost of more than a quarter of a million dollars and today would cost not less than three-quarters of a million, due to the increase in labor and material. We have never received any help from the outside—not even the endowment fund—in the rebuilding of the Seminary, a record of which we may well be proud, as our terms are much less than those of other schools of our class.

In addition to the above mentioned improvements we should erect a brick building, badly needed, on the site of Sky High to run back to a line with the front of Hill Top. This building will give room for a larger gymnasium and swimming pool and not interfere with the tennis courts. The building would be of buff brick, three stories on the lower or south side next to the Infirmary and two stories on the upper or north side. In appearance it will be very much like Agnes McClung Hall, as the lay of the ground is about the same. This will complete our original plan of buildings facing the quadrangle, and will present a very harmonious and stately appearance with the architecture all colonial. This building will be used for the following purposes: First floor for Gymnasium and Swimming Pool; second floor for bedrooms; third floor for Art and Domestic Science on the north end and bedrooms on the south end. I have selected the south end for bedrooms on this floor because all of the plumbing will be located in that portion of the building and the students will be further removed from the annoyances of Market Street. This building will accommodate fifty students. I have only made a rough estimate, but from my experience believe that a building of this kind will cost with equipment not less than $100,000.00. We have had this building in contemplation for a number of years, and now that we have more than two-thirds of the necessary funds on hand, I trust that you will give this much needed improvement your serious consideration in order to meet the demands of our patrons for safety.

After the erection of a new Sky High I would suggest a new Chapel and Dining Room only two stories high on the present site of our Chapel. The Chapel would then be on a level with our first floor class rooms and would give us easy exits that would meet the requirements of our state as to public buildings where entertainments are held. The erection of a new Chapel and Dining Room will complete our plan of improvements and will be adequate for two hundred boarding and one hundred day students with a corps of officers and faculty sufficient to conduct the school. The Alumnae Association has agreed to furnish the money for a pipe organ when the Chapel is built.

We carry insurance of $230,000.00 on the Seminary buildings, furniture and equipment with premiums all paid for three years from October 9th, 1922. All of the outside property is fully insured, and the premiums paid for three years.

We have for the present session 203 boarders and 126 day students. One boarder receives free board and tuition. Two receive fifty percent of board and tuition and four receive the reduction given ministers' daughters. Seventeen day students receive free tuition. Twenty-two missionaries have received all or partial education free.

The Library contains more than six thousand volumes, catalogued and card indexed. A large number of the best magazines and periodicals and the Daily New York Times are furnished for the use of the students through the Library. For a number of years we have been adding about $500.00 worth of books to the Library annually.

COST OF OPERATING

In order that you may have a clear idea of the cost of operating the school, I herewith give you the figures contained in my annual settlement for session 1921-22:

Charges for board and tuition session 1921-1922 and other sources of income not including house rents $149,371.51

DISBURSEMENTS

June 15th, 1921 to June 15th, 1922

Total Disbursements 123,432.59

$ 25,938.92

This being the twenty-fifth annual statement since Miss Baldwin's death, it will be interesting to refer to the records which will show that our total receipts for session 1897-1898 were Four Thousand Dollars less than the amount paid for salaries for session 1921-1922.

FINANCIAL CONDITION OF MARY BALDWIN SEMINARY

at Close of Business January 15, 1923

Value of Property $745,101.29
Investment of Building Fund 65,436.00

In presenting this, the last report of the financial condition of the Mary Baldwin Seminary, I desire to express my gratitude and genuine appreciation of the co-operation, counsel and confidence of the Board of Trustees during the past twenty-five years.

I have given thirty-two years of my life to this work and have always been guided by the precepts and example of Miss Mary Julia Baldwin under whose wonderful training I received my inspiration. Miss Baldwin, a noble Christian woman, was a pioneer in the education of our Southern women, and the unusual success of this splendid institution is, I believe, a direct answer to her prayers.

In order that the Board of Trustees, especially the old members, may be relieved of any embarrassment in filling my position on account of my long service and association with them, will say that whenever they deem a change to be for the good of the institution, my resignation may be considered in the hands of our President. In other words, I want the Board of Trustees to know that my love for the school, and its success is above any personal preferment.

"CERTAIN PEOPLE OF IMPORTANCE"

Certain people of importance—every school has them, their names are written large into the history of the institution, but thrice fortunate are those who are privileged to associate with them and to have their influence upon their lives.

Miss Baldwin of course died before we graduated, yet many of us can remember her great personality, and her influence continued everywhere. Then, too, our class was chosen as ushers by this Association at the unveiling of the memorial window in 1901.

Having less contact with the Seminary, yet always interested in it, and always helping to guide its course, stands Mr. Waddell. Who could forget him? In matchless words he has told us the history of Mary Baldwin Seminary from its founding down to his own time.

Miss Weimar succeeded Miss Baldwin as principal, which position she filled with rare ability for nearly twenty years. Do you remember the way she used to pass us by never seeing us, as though we were the dust beneath her feet? We learned to know that at those times her thought was on Mary Baldwin and could not come down to mere individuals.

Can any old Baldwin girl ever hear a pencil rap the table or a foot give an impatient tap without responding, "Help, favor, injure, please, displease, trust, distrust, etc." at breakneck speed! Could anybody ever put as much into or get as much Latin out of a simple rap as Miss Strickler!

Miss Riddle had a different method, but then Latin and History are different. Have you ever heard of the splendid students, who went to Mary Baldwin before you, until you've felt like the proverbial spot of grease upon the wall. Miss Jacqueline Epps, Miss Jennie Hullihen, Miss Nannie McFarland, Miss Eva McCue, Miss Abby McFarland? Cheer up! Perhaps your name was as familiar to succeeding classes!

Those of us who started in at Mary Baldwin in the primary have a most vivid recollection of one who set our fears at rest. I have even seen Miss Nannie Tate crawl under a desk to get and comfort one shy and crying child. As she consoled us then, so the sight of her today cheers us on our way.

Mary Baldwin traditions are being made every day and other names are being written into them. But perhaps it was with tactful forethought that the committee gave his subject to one so far back. It's always easier to enjoy foibles in the past tense.

"A DAUGHTER OF THE LAND"

"You ask me for something original
I hardly know how to begin
For there's nothing original in me
Except original sin."

In the days of Miss Strickler's dictation class, her greeting, "Impromptu today, girls," brought terror to the heart, and vacancy to the mind. Not since those days has the writer had such a case of complete brain paralysis as when the Secretary's letter announced, "Your subject is to be 'The Daughter of the Land,' which is to deal with the spirit of the Baldwin girl both in school and later life."

The spirit of the Baldwin girl! Her name is legion, her environment many sided, her outside influences of every variety, and her character is complex. But her spirit! May it not be expressed by loyalty? Loyalty is the keyword in every language—it embodies the essential elements of faith, love and service, an interdependent trinity resulting from devoted allegiance. The most decisive form of loyalty has been preserved in the family circle where the holiness of mother love has been enshrined in the hearts of men and women.

As we go from home to the wider sphere of school, we learn there the precepts which broaden the mind and expand the thought, and our "Alma Mater," our fostering mother becomes the symbol through which we keep to the ideals of home, and yet learn to apply those ideals to the larger circles of social contact.

When time brings vital changes of environment and activity, we find down in our hearts a consciousness of debt, and a desire to prove worthy—to prove in a definite, tangible way the spirit so essential to the building of character, that of loyalty.

The Baldwin girl is in many lands, she lives in diverse conditions, she has many problems and experiences, but she is striving to show her loyalty to the high ideals and noble princip es of her Alma Mater, to demonstrate her faith, to stimulate her love, and to render more distinct and worthy service.

"In many a woman's loving heart,
A queen, a queen thrice crowned thou art,
The artless maid, the loving wife,
The mother with her hopes elate
Have crushed the van and front of fate
Right powers thou didst bring to life.
In fightings far on life's rough sea
Thy children in their loyalty
Do battle well, though oft oppressed
Calling thy precepts to their minds,
Mid raging seas and sweeping winds
Must act their noblest, do their best.
Scatter thy bread so far and wide
On the fierce, foaming, bursting tide,
With never a thought of anxiety
In evening's quiet, the day's work done,
On smoothing seas, at set of sun
It will all come back to thee.
The seeds of learning are being sown
Not in thy native state alone,
As thou through storm and sunshine press
From the scattering of thy seeds
The land shall teem with noble deeds
To bless thy memory, M. B. S.

THE TORCH BEARERS

The torch—the school—Mary Baldwin that leads all toward a larger usefulness and greater outlook on life.

The Alumnae—the torch bearers—the ones who go into all parts of the world carrying that torch. You have helped to make the bright light which is the torch. Into whose hand should the increased flame so well be trusted?

To you Alumnae is given a wonderful privilege of carrying to the world a light so bright that it will never grow dim, a light that shall burn and illumine all upon whom it sheds a gleam, with a radiance that shall ever continue so because of your ever living interest.

A light will soon burn low and finally go out if it were not held high and protected by the torch bearer. It takes the whole—the torch and the bearer—to make the brilliant light.

To you Alumnae we say

"Be such a splendid torch bearer that the light will shine more brightly than ever before because the students each year are adding to its brillance and because you carry it."

(Mabel Leftwich Pelletier sent a telegram of greetings to the Classes of '01 and '03.)

"THE LONG ROLL"

Nineteen years is a long stretch. It would seem that any sensible person might get over anything in that time! But it has been just that long since I said good-bye to M. B. S., and The Board still gives me a queer, very small feeling. No wonder then that I am somewhat overcome at being asked to propose a toast to that august body, under the title of "The Long Roll." If I were there in the flesh I should probably take to my heels as the Blue Coats did when Jackson and his men dashed through the Valley, but distance lends boldness so Here's to The Board—Past, Present and Future. Here's to their devotion to an Ideal; their unselfish fight for that Ideal; their attainment of that Ideal, so strongly supported by the Synod. Like those other fighters in the Valley, their names are inscribed upon a long roll that will be treasured by the daughters, and the daughters of daughters in all the years to come.

THE BROAD HIGHWAY

To the greater Mary Baldwin we are now working, on the broad highway North of Staunton it will stand, even greater and more majestic than the one we know and love so well. There it stands a place where our needs are met to prepare us for the great journey on the highway of life. Can anything be greater than to serve? Shall we look back into the past where for 80 years this institution has typified the highest ideals or shall we look into the future and see an institution serving a greater number, upholding the ideals of love, truth and righteousness. May we have a part in so noble a task and be builders of characters? To this end may Mary Baldwin ever strive.

"ROUGH HEWN"

History of Mary Baldwin Seminary during the Civil War Period.

In the fall of 1863, when Miss Baldwin undertook her enterprise, every conceivable obstacle to hinder her progress presented itself. Sh had labored all summer to provide sufficient supplies for the coming session, and with the help of her many kind friends, had at last succeeded.

As detachments of the northern troops were frequently in and around Staunton, these supplies were liable at any minute to mysterious disappearances, and many and humorous are the stories told of the ingenuity and courage of Miss Baldwin and of the students during this period. As winter was approaching, the wood pile was the point of most strategic importance, and whenever the cry of "Yankees" was sounded, out filed the lines of Seminary girls, each seizing a log of wood and marching back to deposit in the cellar.

Of course, during the "hard times" of the war feminine wardrobes were very meager, yet each girl devoted one of her skirts to patriotic service. This was done in order to conceal the flour supply. A barrel was placed in each room, a dainty crinoline skirt draped over it—and presto change! a modern dressing table for each inmate. Hams were concealed in stoves and desks, and the entire school was overflowing—not with milk and honey—but with flour and ham.

Enough emphasis cannot be placed on the kindness of the friends of the school at this time, who sent all the gifts and necessities they were able to do without—one gift taking the form of a bag of cats sent by a lady who had heard the rats were very bad in the school. Needless to say the cats were returned, as it was difficult enough to feed the girls, much less animals with nine lives

When their own gallant boys in gray came through the town, the girls always entertained them with soirees, and although the musicians had had no other pieces to study than leaves torn from an old song book, yet the admiring looks and heartful applause of the Southern soldiers amply repaid all efforts and privations.

Yet humorous as these and many other instances are, we must never overlook the sacrifices and hardships that were included in this period. Money matters were complicated—Confederate money being of very little value—supplies were hard to get and still harder to keep, and even personal danger from the enemy was threatening—yet from these adversities was born our Mary Baldwin Seminary, and thus to her was given the spirit of courage and sacrifice which is hers today. She stood as unscathed from her first tests, as she now stands from the assault of Time—forever the White and Yellow untarnished.

"THE YEAR OF DELIGHT"

Mary Baldwin girls are already rather well satisfied as it is. As you may have noticed tonight her daughters are not overmuch inclined to hide their school light under a bushel. They are like Virginians about their nativity. At least, like Virginians are said to be down in North Carolina. They say "down home" that Virginians have written as a sacred rule in their code of etiquette and good manners never to ask a man if he is from Virginia. If he is not, you will hurt his feelings. If he is, you need not trouble to ask him. He will soon tell you about it himself. It is so with Mary Baldwin Alumnae and very naturally so at that. Why not? True, we may be only a Junior College now, but what alumna of Mary Baldwin does not feel that she is a most privileged person; that it is better to be a Junior in Mary Baldwin than even a Senior anywhere else?

"Better fifty years of Europe,
Than a cycle of Cathay."

In that respect she is like the Irishman about his country. An Englishman ,a Frenchman and an Irishman were talking about their respective countries. The Englishman declared that if he were not an Englishman he would prefer to be a Frenchman. The Frenchman courteously responded that if he were not a Frenchman he would be an Englishman. Whereupon the Irishman said: "Faith, and if I were not an Irishman I would be ashamed of myself."

Yet we are glad that the old school is to expand next year, and we joyously toast that great event. We who now enjoy the high privilege of dwelling within her classic walls look forward with the most pleasurable anticipation to the future. With pride and joy we contemplate the prospect of the new dignities and honors that our beloved Alma Mater will add to her present rich store of scholastic attainments.

1. One of the joys of living in a real college will be the satisfaction of knowing that the students of no other institution can assume superior airs in our presence. In the classic words of Milton, it does rather get one's angora to be looked down on by students of A grade colleges, as tho one were still in the kindergarten or primary department, because one is going to a Junior College. Just because a school is not listed as a standard College, everything else goes for nothing with some condescending but superficial critics. The fine tone of the school, its carefully selected and wisely adjusted courses of study, its competent faculty and high standards of scholarship, all these are as naught. Even such an institution as Mary Baldwin is thoughtlessly classed with the general run of girls' boarding schools! (Or "select seminaries for refined young ladies.") Just give Mary Baldwin a little time to carry out her present well laid plans, and the bluest stocking from Wellesley or Vassar will have nothing on her loyal and devoted daughters. We will join the Highbrows and be numbered among the Intellectuals.

2. Then we shall rejoice as students of Mary Baldwin in her fair name and standing in Educational circles. Time was when any socalled college could hang out her shingle in the Educational World, offering to confer any degree or certificate of graduation, and could get by with it, with the rank and file of people, a sheepskin from one school was as good as another. But now schools have been strictly graded and college curricula and degrees standardized. The sheep are being separated from the goats. The students of Mary Baldwin are jealous for the good name of their Alma Mater. They would have her, like Caesar's wife, above suspicion. They will rejoice in future to know that she is lifted in name as well as fact out of this educational hodgepodge, and stands acknowledged among schools, the peer of any in the land.

3. And last, Mary Baldwin students will rejoice and be glad for their own sake, when she becomes a full fledged Woman's College. In these days all doors are open to enlightened womanhood; not only the social and domestic, but professional, political and commercial. The Mary Baldwin girl does not want to be a slacker. She aims to meet the various challenges of present day life and discharge the new and strange duties that modern conditions have thrust upon her. The students of Mary Baldwin desire to do their part in life and do it well. But to do that they must be prepared by thorough going education and genuine intellectual training. In these days of competition and of specification there is no place in the line of march for the unfit! Hence the Mary Baldwin student will be happy next year. In the new and larger college that is to be, she will know that she will be well prepared for what awaits her in life. She will have the delight of feeling that in addition to the peculiar advantages this school offers in its splendid social tradition and spiritual atmosphere, she enjoys here all the fuller scholastic opportunities provided in the standard Colleges of higher learning. So, while possessing invaluable benefits here that are too often lacking in other institutions, she will be no whit behind any of her sisters in preparation for the duties and opportunities that await her in this twentieth century world.

"THE BREAKING POINT"

From the time you are born
Till you ride in a hearse
There's nothing so bad, but it might have been worse—
So smile!

It's hard enough to smile when you have to leave the Seminary, but I thought the worst had come when I was told that I had to say farewell tonight in behalf of the Senior Class. Just before I came to the banquet, I looked into the mirror to make sure that the smile that I had ordered for this occasion was on straight, but even then I feared it might slip before the evening was over. As I've listened to one speech after the other and thought of my own pitiful efforts, I have wondered whether there would be anything left of the smile to slip.

We know that you all have shared this experience with us, but as it is fresher—so it is keener to us. During school-girl days, the Seminary is so much a part of our life that it is hard to realize its influence upon us. Though this influence will remain with us always, we hope that we will not always feel the separation as we do tonight.

To the faculty, especially our class patron, we would say—that in spite of the fact that relations have sometimes been strained and we've often wondered whether you would pass us on examinations—that it is with sadness that we say farewell.

To Miss Higgins and Mr. King we would say that whenever we return to visit our "Alma Mater," one of the greatest joys will be looking forward to seeing them again.

With the thought of joining our fellow alumnae and that the farewell has been said, the smile begins to return, for—

"They who have nothing more to fear may well Indulge a smile at that which one appall'd."

THE MARY BALDWIN SYSTEM

The Mary Baldwin System of education contains two institutions, Mary Baldwin College for women and Mary Baldwin Seminary for students of a sub-collegiate grade.

Both of these institutions are under the control of the same Board of Trustees, whose members are elected by the Southern Presbyterian Synod of Virginia. No effort will be made to win to the Presbyterian Church students who come from other denominations, but the control of the institutions by the Synod of Virginia will give every assurance that evangelical Christianity will hold the highest place among their aims.

Mary Baldwin Seminary will occupy permanently the grounds and buildings that have been acquired and used by the old Mary Baldwin Seminary throughout its years of splendid service. Mary Baldwin College will be sheltered for the present in the same plant with the Seminary, but as soon as possible, a new plant will be provided for it outside of the city limits. It is the purpose of the Trustees to push the development of the College as rapidly as possible, to make of it a standard college.

The name of Mary Baldwin stands for a well defined group of ideals of womanhood and education which Miss Baldwin embodied in her own personality. She stamped those ideals indelibly upon the Seminary, and now the whole system which bears her name will perpetuate them.

By having the Preparatory School and the College under the same board of control, in close relationship to each other, guided by the same general policies and dominated by the same institutional spirit, students will avoid the loss of time often incurred by abrupt changes from one institution to another.
